Crowding at Dickinson High School increases as population grows and enrollment expands. The 36 typewriters in the first year typing room are not enough for all of the students who would like to take the course, Principal Frank Crocker told a citizen committee on plant utilization this week. Because of the limited facilities, the school limits the typing I course to Junior and Senior students only.

The committee is one of seven formed last month in response to Supt. A. J. Labay's request for a citizen study and evaluation of the school system.
