LANGUAGE ARTS

Kaaren Beale
English III

Because the study of English is in effect, an encyclopedic endeavor, it was not always easy. A student may have felt that he thoroughly understood a particular work of literature, only to have discovered that trying to condense his thoughts into a well-developed 500-word theme which substantiated a narrowly-stated thesis was quite another problem.

To possess the ability to express oneself well in words was only one facet of the English department's wish for its students. Fundamental to personality development was consideration and understanding of attitudes of all people through the study and enjoyment of the literature of different nations.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Foreign Languages, which were Greek to many students, were repeatedly studied by various classes. They learned the intricate verb changings and became fluent in speech.

Students also partook in extracurricular activities such as field trips and the Gator Fair and raised money for their clubs with bake sales and car washes.

SOCIAL STUDIES

The Social Studies Department last year continued to seek new ways to bring each student closer to American democratic reality from stimulation games to mock courts and Congress. Current periodicals, paperback books and research played a more important role this year with the development of a resource lab and student assistants. Classroom sets of the HOUSTON CHRONICLE, TIME, and SEARCH magazines helped many students to greater understanding of the world around them. Dickinson students also participated in the VFW Voice of Democracy Radio Script Program. Operation Close-Up for the first time saw two Dickinson seniors receive week-long fellowships to Washington, D. C.

The Science department tried to offer a curriculum that would provide a backlog of knowledge and experience. By providing a variety of subjects, it offered not only required courses, but also electives that might be pursued for further study by the science-oriented students.

The Science department last year introduced a new class, Field Biology. Students also participated in Ecology activities and Oceanography field trips. While some of the classes gleefully studied the anatomy of a deceased cat, others poured through atoms and chemical compounds.

VOCATIONAL DEPARTMENT

The Students in the 5 Vocational Programs last year received extensive classroom lessons and some earned valuable experience by working in various fields. Even though many students grumbled about boring filmstrips and endless questions and quizzes, they realized what a great opportunity they had to be a part of this department.

The Vocational Clubs were involved in activities such as district and state conventions, field trips, community service projects, parties and many other events.

If you really want to know about COLLEGE OF THE MAINLAND, why not ask the students who go there?

They'll tell you that at College of the Mainland, each student is an INDIVIDUAL. Not an enrollment statistic. Not one of 500 students in a freshman lecture class. But a one-of-a-kind human being!

At College of the Mainland, there is a close relationship between students and instructors. Classes are small to allow individualized attention and every instructor sets aside at least five hours each week for personal conferences. In addition, students and staff have continual contact in countless extra-curricular activities scheduled throughout a typical school week.

The outstanding teaching staff is drawn to COM from all parts of the country. They all have advanced degrees and a thorough competence in their fields PLUS a sensitive awareness of the needs and aspirations of young people.

College of the Mainland has a national reputation for its unique, self-paced approach to instruction. Courses offered in the Associate in Arts Degree Program are transferable to senior institutions and fully credited toward a B.A. or B.S. Degree.

A staff of professional counselors are available to discuss your goals, to help you assess your aptitudes and interests. You can set up a personal conference by calling the Admissions Office, 938-1211, Ext. 264.

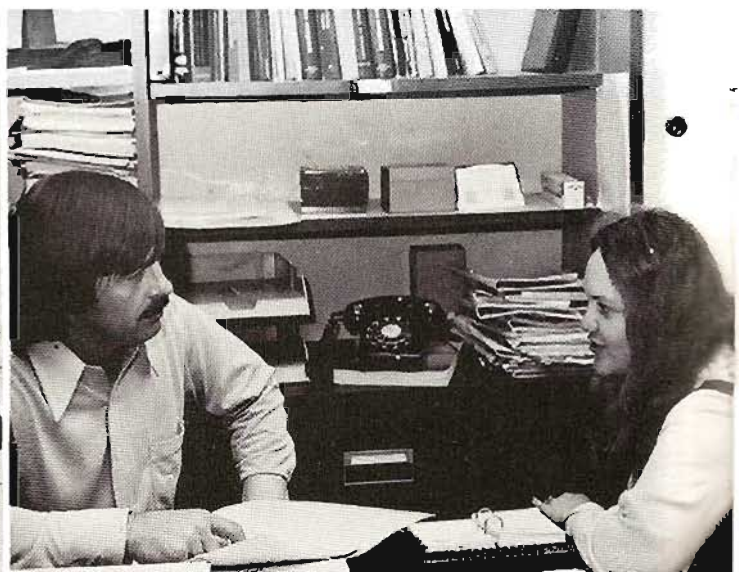

College of the Mainland may be the college you're looking for. Drop by for a visit — and be sure to talk to our students.

Gwen Jurca: "If you're trying to find yourself, this is the place to come"

A bird's-eyeview of an informal Student Government Meeting in COM's College Center. The student-elected organization represents the student body on various college committees, thus insuring communication of student views to the Administration.

Frequent student-instructor conferences are a basic part of the instructional program.

Dan Thompson: "Let me put it this way: College of the Mainland is good for your head."

Zaneta Burnett: "I feel I really count as an individual."

Michael Augustus: "It's exciting here. There's a great freedom to get involved."

Ernie Pyle: "It's easy to establish open and direct communication with instructors because you know they really care."
