Art brings beauty to school

Art this year was a colorful and creative experience. The students kept busy with a variety of activities. Though tying knots and more knots, art students found to their surprise an end result of beautiful and often complex macramés. The students also dabbed with the subtleness of water color, and molded "that gunky clay" into sturdy pottery. The more advanced students of commercial art sculpted and refined their talents in graphic design, and in oil painting, as well as experimenting with many other forms of art.

Music provides outlet for creative talents

The Six Flags over Texas contest was not the only event that the band participated in. They also traveled to Sea Arama, UIL, and Marching Contest in Alvin. They provided spirit at the Pep Rallies and during the football activities. Besides spending hours preparing for these contests, the band studied music theory and techniques.

The Choir was also an active music-making group. They gave a Christmas Concert, performed at Dunbar, Bacliff, McAdams, and Citizen's State Bank. They also participated in UIL and a Spring Concert, and studied music theory. The Singers, a few select students, provided entertainment at many events and for civic groups.

Home Economics students prepare for life

Home Economics students prepared themselves for that "terrible world of self-dependence" into which they are thrown after graduation in Home Economics classes. They learned everything from the difference between Vitamin A and Vitamin D milk, to the "ins and outs" of sewing one's own clothing. There were also many discussions concerning the different marital duties, the proper raising of children, and the importance of a well-balanced diet.

Industrial Arts students use their hands

Industrial Arts was a course developed for the use of hands and machines in order to create many things of all different shapes and sizes. Industrial Arts was made up of many, varied fields. Drafting involved perspective and transference of an object from one plane to another. In Woodshop students cut, sanded, and varnished wood to form tables, cabinets, and chairs. Metal Shop students molded metal into practical and creative shapes. Office Duplication students duplicated, and duplicated, and duplicated tests, programs, and posters.

History returns to past

Returning to the past, experiencing cultures of other lands, and getting involved in the government livened up the traditional courses of American and World History, Government, and the senior elective, Social Science. Besides trying to memorize a million different dates, American History students stepped into the past, reenacting battles of the Civil War, and tracing the steps of our forefathers as they headed West. World History students took a tour of the cultures of the world, preparing and tasting such exotic dishes as Russian borsch, and Chinese won-ton soup. Guest speakers, such as a Russian Orthodox priest, opened the avenues of their minds to the questions about days gone by, while some of the lucky students had a chance to return to the gold rush days by panning for gold.

The Government classes analyzed many forms of government, turning them upside down, and inside out until they were satisfied. The students took a hard look at the intricacies of our own government, forming mock Congresses, viewing the world of the courtroom through mock trials, and hotly debating controversial social and political issues. The Social Science classes took even a further step, looking at the complicated economic system of our country. Besides this, the students of one class became real participants, leading a boycott against rising coffee prices, some of them even voicing their opinions on local television.

Business teaches information beneficial in personal life

For those students interested in secretarial training, our high school's Business Department provided almost everything under the sun.

Obviously, Typing I taught the "A, B, C's" of business communications, while second year students sharpened their previously acquired skills. Also included for the secretary "hopefuls" were courses in shorthand.

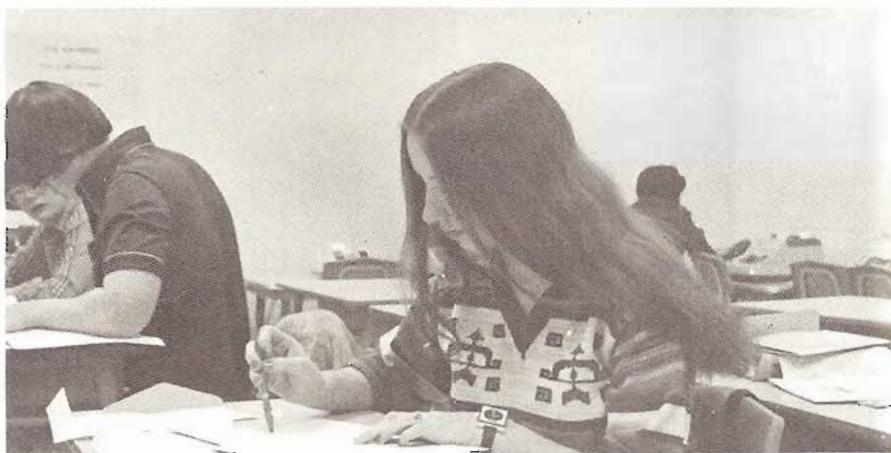

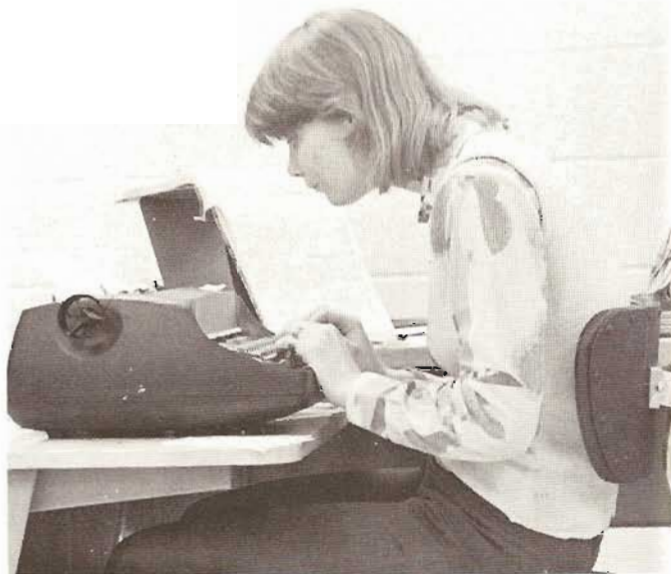

In the clerical world, trainees learned from classes in both Record Keeping and Accounting.

Vocational students work at jobs

Attending classes in the morning, and working in the afternoon, the DE, VOE, ICT, and HOCT students experienced the business world of which they would soon be a part. Whether it might be working in the emergency room of a hospital, or working in an auto part store trying to explain to a customer that the thing-ama-gig they were talking about was really only a water pump. These students obtained invaluable experience in dealing with people, as well as becoming oriented with the occupational field of their interest.

FACES

"Did you hear what he said?" . . . And did you hear what happened last weekend when . . ."

"Well, he's only a freshman, but he's awfully cute. Too bad he's so short . . ."

"I guess you know whose new Camaro that is in the parking lot . . ."

"A sophomore to Prom? Well, she may be a little young . . ."

"You know how those juniors are when they get their rings."

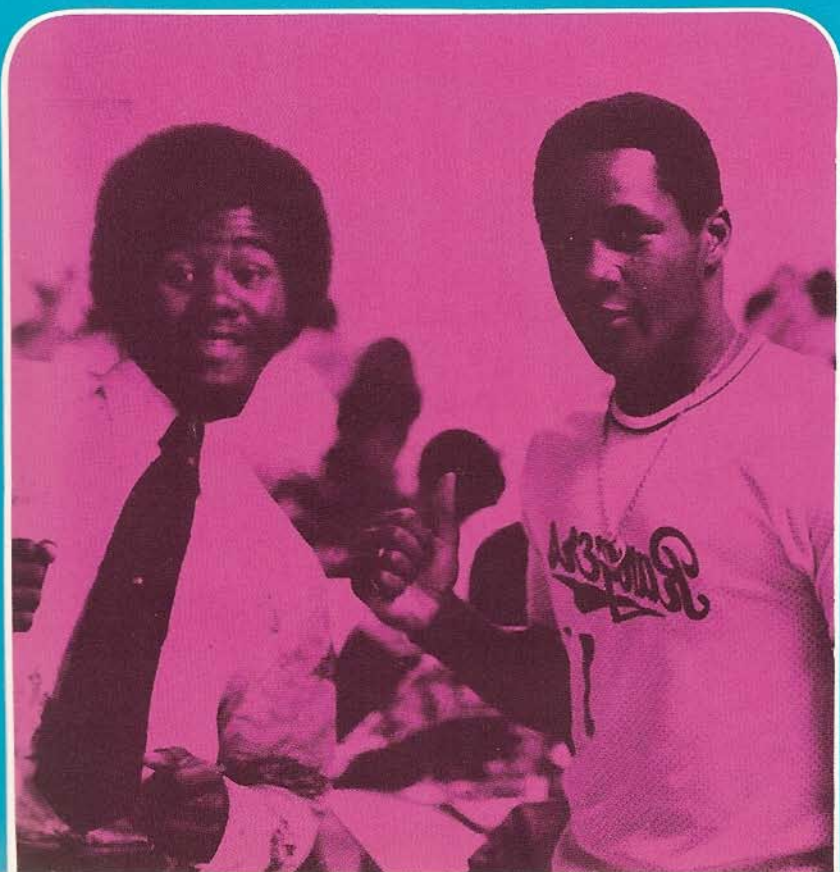

"Senioritis? What are the symptoms?"

"I certainly need a vacation. I don't think I could grade another paper, give another make-up test, or face these kids another day."

"I can't wait till I'm a senior. They have all the fun!"

"Mom says he is just too old . . . just because he's a junior."

"All those big guys ever say to me is 'Hey fish'."

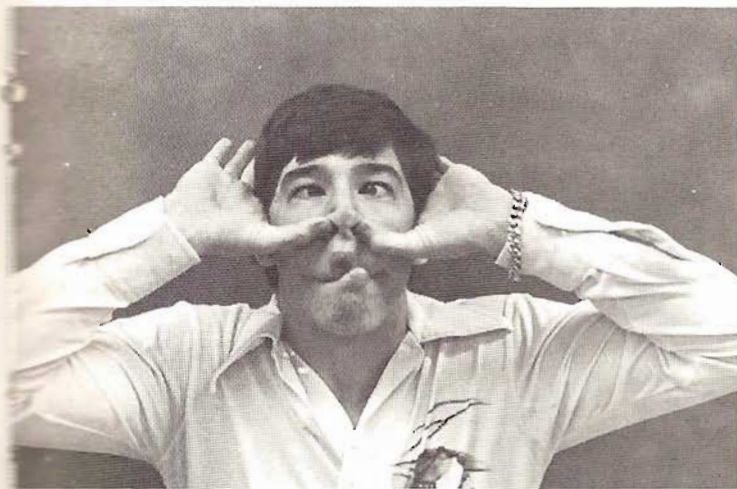

Seniors take an unusual view of the school. Lori Gregory and Teresa Braeuer.
